Persuasive essay topics for high school students

Persuasive essays are a bit like argument essays and persuasive speeches, but they tend to be a little kinder and gentler. Argument essays require you to discuss and to attack an alternate view, while persuasive essays are attempts to convince the reader that you have a believable argument. In other words, you are an advocate, not an adversary.

Introduction: This is the opening paragraph of your essay. It contains the hook, which is used to grab the reader's attention, and the thesis, or argument, which you'll explain in the next section. Body: This is the heart of your essay, usually three to five paragraphs in length. Each paragraph examines one theme or issue used to support your thesis. Conclusion: This is the final paragraph of your essay. In it, you'll sum up the main points of the body and connect them to your thesis. Persuasive essays often use the conclusion as a last appeal to the audience. And almost every high school, college, and university student is asked to write such essays in their academic career. It reveals the writer's ability to persuade and convince people through facts and logic. Learning how to choose an appropriate and attractive topic is all you need to get started. You will get to know all about choosing the right topic in this blog. Keep reading to find persuasive essay topics for students and pick a topic that sparks your interest. How to Choose a Persuasive Essay Topic? Choosing a writing topic for your persuasive essay writing is essential. The right topic will let you draft an exceptional and well-written essay. Selecting a persuasive essay topic might sound easy, but in reality, choosing a good idea can be challenging. You cannot randomly start writing a persuasive essay about any topic and expect your essay to be brilliant. To select the best topic for your essay, take these few essential steps: 1. Know your Interests - You can only draft an effective essay if you are writing about something that interests you. When you write something you are passionate about, you provide strong logic, and enthusiasm helps to persuade the readers. 2. Narrow Down Ideas - Make a rough list of the topic of your interest. Analyze all the issues and identify topics that you think you can present well, as the available information is generous. 3. Pick your Stance - Now that you know the information is sufficient on a topic decide your stance. Pick a side to support with evidence and logic. Remember that the writer's point of view plays a significant role in this assignment type. 4. Controversy is the Best Policy - People love to read about controversial stuff. If you choose a controversial topic, it is more likely that the readers will go through the entire essay to ease their curiosity. Even if they don't like it, they will still read it. If you have your stance over a controversy, share it with the audience. After passing your ideas through these filters, you will have a strong and arguable topic to draft an essay. In addition to this, when deciding on the topic, keep the target audience in mind. It will help you come up with strong persuasive speech topics, examples are given below. (back to top) Good Persuasive Essay Topics In some cases, an instructor assigns the topic, but if you get to choose your topic, then be creative and unique. Choose a topic that will allow you to take a stand for a social issue or a topic you care deeply about. You will feel inspired to write about it. The topic you choose should have evidence and facts that you can include in your essay. The ideas you present in your essay should be specific and to the point. This will allow you to stay to the point with a coherent flow in your essay. Highlight the main purpose of your essay by reiterating it in your essay in a different way. This way the audience will be clear on what your stance is. Don't choose topics that don't have enough information on the internet or that will be difficult to work on. The topic should not be too vague, or it will not make any sense to the reader. The first and foremost step in any academic writing is choosing a topic. For persuasive essays, the topic you choose should be broad. A writer gets more chances to convince and persuade a reader.
